SUMMARY

An entry-level developer, and an avid musician, excited to pursue a career in front-end web development. I have spent the last twelve years playing instruments and learning the craft, and in doing so developed a love for technology. Interestingly enough, making music and writing code share similar qualities. Both require a strong sense of creativity, an aptitude for design, and a knack for problem solving. As a developer, I can utilize these strengths when approaching new projects, designing web pages and programs, and improving the user experience. I look forward to helping customers bring their ideas to life, and will be an integral part in helping my employer grow and succeed.
